is an insulin-dependent diabetic patient.

Therefore, the therapy of the patient includes the injection of insulin subcutaneously several times a day. The blood glucose has to be monitored on a regular basis, in regular intervals.

To assure the therapy syringes, needles, insulin vials, blood glucose monitoring devices and test strips are required.

In some patients the insulin is delivered by a small pump which the patient carries on his / her body. The necessary accessories are insulin cartridge, catheter.

Lack of access to these things would threaten the patient's life within a short period of time, and so that permanent access is necessary.
